1. ORGANIZATION OF THE T-15 AND H-100-4000 PROGRAMS

The T-15 and H-100-4000 programs are organized into two main phases. The first phase is the initial design and development of the program, which includes the selection of the program structure, the development of the program logic, and the development of the program code. The second phase is the testing and evaluation of the program, which includes the development of test cases, the execution of the test cases, and the analysis of the test results.
